Standards

Fire Retardant Noticeboards

The consequence of fire spread within circulation and escape routes presents a high risk to the building occupants. Materials and items on the walls of these areas should not propagate or accelerate a fire, therefore allowing the occupants the opportunity to exit safely. It is recommended that noticeboards used in these areas should be fire retardant.

FlameShield noticeboards are manufactured in the UK by Spaceright Europe Ltd.

The FlameShield noticeboard core and bonded textile are fire retardant as a composite, meeting Class 0 when assessed to BS 476 Parts 6 and 7 and comply with Class B-s1, d0 when tested to BS-EN13501-1: 2002.

The clear plastic doors used in tamperproof FlameShield noticeboards are tested separately, and conform to Class 1Y when assessed to BS 476 part 7.

FlameShield noticeboards are engineered to last and designed to meet the required standards, as a result you will find they are heavier, robust and more dense than a standard noticeboard.

Building owners may need to regularly review the fire risks in their premises to comply with their national regulations. Part of that review should consider the type and extent of noticeboard installed, the management of its use, the location of the noticeboard with respect to escape routes, and the other fire safety precautions within the building.

Documents related to fire safety risk assessments can be found at:
